<td>Abstract</td>
<td>This collection contains 496 posters which illustrate both civilian and military viewpoints of World War I. The collection is arranged thematically into fifteen series. The first two series, the Fred V. Owen and T.S. Davidson posters, contain original drawings by local North Carolina artists. The posters in the remaining series are prints created by state or national organizations that feature the work of well-known artists such as James Montgomery Flagg, J.C. Leyendecker, and Howard Chandler Christy. The posters serve a variety of functions, but primarily they encourage viewers to support organizations, such as the Red Cross or the YMCA; to conserve resources, such as food and fuel; to contribute to the war effort, such as by purchasing bonds; or to enlist in the armed forces. Many of the posters contain patriotic symbols like Columbia, Uncle Sam, eagles, and the American flag. Images of soldiers, sailors, and marines, as well as, airplanes, ships, and tanks are also featured prominently. While the majority of posters contain positive images which invoke patriotism, service, and duty, others depict negative images of Kaiser Wilhelm and German soldiers as savage, brutal &quot;Huns.&quot;</td>

1. Fred V. Owen Posters

Historical note

These posters are original drawings by Fred V. Owen, evidently created in North Carolina between 1917 and 1918 to encourage enlistment in the U.S. Army. Some were mailed from army recruiting offices in Greensboro and Asheville to recruiting stations in Asheville, Charlotte, and Winston-Salem, while others were apparently displayed at the post office in Durham.

Scope and Contents note

The works appeal heavily to American patriotism and manhood, and the need to defend civilization against the threat of enemy barbarity. Constant themes are the depraved, bloody-handed German soldier, and the wicked yet cowardly Kaiser Wilhelm II, emperor of Germany. The characterization of the foe takes an extreme form in the gruesome image of the "Hun," a murderous savage.

2. T.S. Davidson Posters

Scope and Contents note

These works appeal heavily to American patriotism and manhood, and the need to defend civilization against the threat of enemy barbarity. Constant themes are the depraved, bloody-handed German soldier, and the wicked yet cowardly Kaiser Wilhelm II, emperor of Germany. In its extreme form, the enemy menace is characterized as the "Hun," a murderous savage, or as a lurid beast, entirely without restraint. Uncle Sam and Marianne appear frequently as national personifications of the United States and France, respectively. The goddess Liberty, representing the two nations alternately, is another reoccurring symbol, often depicted in peril.

Historical note

These posters are original drawings by T. S. Davidson, evidently created in North Carolina between 1917 and 1918 to encourage enlistment in the U.S. Army. Some were mailed from army recruiting offices in Greensboro and Asheville to recruiting stations in Raleigh and Charlotte, while others were apparently displayed at the post office in Durham.

3. Red Cross Posters

Scope and Contents note

These posters were created by the American Red Cross between 1917 and 1920, primarily to raise financial support for its service and relief work at home and abroad, and to encourage new membership. Most of the material was used to advertise the organization's two War Fund appeals (the first in 1917 and the second in 1918) and Roll Call special recruitment drives (held at Christmastime those years and continued annually thereafter), as well to promote postwar membership efforts. Also included are bulletins issued by the War Council, the organization's wartime governing body.

The works appeal heavily to American patriotism and benevolence. Romantic images of women appear frequently; in the person of the Red Cross nurse, the feminine is portrayed as an alluring figure, but also as nurturer and caregiver. Another reoccurring theme is the duty of civilians to match the sacrifice made by the nation's servicemen.

Historical note

During World War I, the American Red Cross performed extensive service on the home front by aiding the needy, engaging in public health work, and helping to provide for the general welfare of military personnel in camps, cantonments, and naval bases across the nation. The organization's most significant contribution to the war effort, however, was in serving in an auxiliary capacity to the armed forces overseas, through its hospital and medical services. The Red Cross operated twenty-four hospitals in France, as well as thirteen in Britain, mostly under military authority. Nearly 20,000 Red Cross nurses served on active duty with the American Expeditionary Force, comprising over 80 percent of nurses in the U.S. Army. The Red Cross further supplemented the work of the military by organizing fifty-eight base hospitals at home and abroad and recruiting forty-seven ambulance companies for battlefield service in the army. In addition to operating twelve convalescent homes, eight infirmaries, and thirteen dispensaries for American soldiers in France, the organization also provided camp and canteen services for doughboys as well as Allied troops, often just behind the front lines. Continuing its traditional humanitarian role overseas, the Red Cross assisted refugees, children, and other victims of the war throughout Europe. Civilian relief efforts continued after the Armistice in as many as twenty-four nations.

4. Service and Relief Organization Posters

Historical note

During World War I, a wide variety of service organizations attended to the morale, welfare, and recreational needs of America's fighting men, both at home and overseas. The Young Men's Christian Association (YMCA) performed the vast majority of this work among servicemen in the American Expeditionary Force, operating canteens, "huts," and post exchanges for their spiritual and physical well-being. The Young Women's Christian Association (YWCA) operated "hostess houses" both in the United States, where service personnel in training camps could receive visitors, and in France, offering entertainment for the troops and accommodation for women serving with the military. It also trained young women to enter the labor force as industrial, agricultural, and clerical workers, replacing men gone "over there." In November 1918, seven of the service organizations--the YMCA, YWCA, Salvation Army, National Catholic War Council (with the Knights of Columbus), Jewish Welfare Board, War Camp Community Service, and the American Library Association--combined to hold a fund drive, the United War Work Campaign, to raise $170,500,000 for the support of their efforts.

While the American Red Cross led humanitarian efforts on behalf of suffering civilians during and after the war, it was assisted by many other relief organizations. The American Committee for Relief in the Near East (later Near East Relief) assisted victims of the Armenian Genocide, while the American Jewish Relief Committee for Sufferers from the War and American Jewish Joint Distribution Committee aided Jews in Eastern Europe and the Near East.

Text-only poster printed on paper. Damaged across the top. 12.75 x 9.5 in.

MilColl.WWI.Posters.7.21 Stick To Your Job

Scope and Contents note
Text urges workers to stay on the present job; drifting from job to job keeps machines idle and helps the Kaiser. Staying on the job will assure that fighters for freedom are armed, fed, and clothed.
Text-only poster printed on paper. 15 x 10 in.

MilColl.WWI.Posters.7.22 Our Children Will Judge Us By What We've Done

Scope and Contents note

Text: "To win this war we all must do our best regardless of profit. Production is the big thing. This applies to wage earners as well as employees. We can not start by stopping; we can not multiply by dividing; we must forget our prejudices and drive ahead. After this war, only those who have helped win it will amount to anything. Our children then will judge us--not by what we've got, but by what we've done!"

Text-only poster printed on paper. 15 x 10 in.

MilColl.WWI.Posters.7.23 Our Children Will Judge Us by What We Did During the War

Scope and Contents note

Text: "We must all do our best to make the change from war work to peace work as easy as possible. Cooperation is the big thing needed now! We cannot start by stopping; we cannot multiply by dividing; we must forget our prejudices and drive ahead. Our children will judge us by what we did during the war and by how we acted after the war."

Text-only poster printed on paper. 15 x 9.5 in.

MilColl.WWI.Posters.7.24 Let Us Remember Russia!

Scope and Contents note

Text urges Americans to remember Russia: they meant well, but they "took time to talk while the house was burning!" The Kaiser encouraged them but he must not play the same trick on America.
Text-only poster printed on paper. 15 x 10 in.

MilColl.WWI.Posters.7.25 America's Strength

Scope and Contents note

Germany's strength lies in the willingness of her military caste to sacrifice her people; America's strength lies in the willingness of Americans to freely make even greater sacrifices. Americans should think of winning the war, not of profits and wages. Returning veterans will ask, "What did you do to help win the war?"

Text-only poster printed on paper. 15 x 10 in.

MilColl.WWI.Posters.7.26 The Battle Line Is Not Alone in France!

Scope and Contents note

8. Shipping Posters

Historical note

The U.S. Shipping Board was created as an independent agency of the executive branch by the Shipping Act of September 7, 1916 (39 Stat. 728) to encourage, develop, and create "a naval auxiliary and naval reserve and a merchant marine to meet the requirements of the commerce of the United States. The law provided for a subsidiary corporation, the Emergency Fleet Corporation, solely controlled by the Board. A law passed February 11, 1927, changed the name of the corporation to the United States Shipping Board Merchant Fleet Corporation. The World War forced on the Board additional duties, "operating and maintaining a fleet of merchant vessels built or otherwise acquired by the National government for war purposes." All of the work of the Board concerned with ship operation was carried out through the Corporation. The U.S. Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation created all the posters in this series. Most of the posters in the series carry a DPP logo from the Committee on Public Information, Division of Pictorial Publicity.

9. Liberty Loan Posters

Historical note

Starting in 1917, the government of the United States instituted a series of aggressive fund-raising campaigns in support of the war. The four Liberty Loans and the Victory Liberty Loan all produced bonds redeemable for their original values plus interest. These campaigns raised nearly 30 billion dollars between 1917 and 1919. The government also used the revenues from War Savings Stamps to finance the war effort. These stamps were available in values from 10 cents to 5 dollars. Citizens, including children, bought these stamps at post offices, and affixed them savings books. When a book was full, it could be redeemed for a war bond/certificate. The Liberty Loans, Victory Liberty Loans, and War Savings Stamps were all advertised heavily on a wide variety of posters.

MilColl.WWI.Posters.11.5 What the Navy Is Doing--They Found Their Mark ca. 1917-1918

Scope and Contents note
Black-and-white photograph of gun crew loading a gun. Text: "This remarkable photograph was taken during a submarine attack on the U.S.S. Pocahontas, just as the guns were firing at the enemy. Note the steadiness of the gun crew itself, as if at drill instead of in actual combat. Be a gun-pointer and hit the bull's-eye." Photograph by Lieut. Wm. Sellers, P.C., U.S.N.
Poster printed on paper--black-and-white image with black and red text. 14 x 17 in.

MilColl.WWI.Posters.11.6 What the Navy Is Doing--The Road to France--The Navy Keeps It Open ca. 1917-1918

Scope and Contents note
Nine black-and-white photographs showing airplane patrol, lookouts, gun crews, sailors eating, and on deck assembly. Text: "The Navy is on the job. Because of its vigilance hundreds of thousands of American soldiers have landed safe in France. In a steady stream their supplies and munitions have followed. Not a single transport bound for 'over there' has been lost, convoyed by the American Navy. Fritz and his submarines are vanishing--the American tar has got him running. So give a push and enlist in the Navy."

Photographs by W. A. Nightingale, U.S.N.

Poster printed on paper--black-and-white images with black and red text. 14 x 17 in.

Scope and Contents note

Six black-and-white photographs of Navy rations and food transportation. Text: "Sea fighters must have A-1 stuff and the American Navy is the best fed in the world. Before taken on board ship, every ounce of meat is inspected. Admiral and apprentice boy eat the same beef. To supply the Navy in war with food is a giant's task, for 300,000 officers and men require in a year some 532,456,000 pounds of provisions. This has been done well and with dispatch and high praise has come to the Navy for this achievement. Come in for fighting and big eats and enlist in the Navy."

Poster printed on paper--black-and-white images with black and red text. 14 x 17 in.

Scope and Contents note

Image of Germans surrendering U-boat "from a photograph taken on the U.S.S. Fanning". Text: "We got them. Here they are, captured by the Fanning and the Nicholson, holding out their hands shouting 'Kamerad'." Forty-two minutes after the tip of the periscope of this U-boat had been sighted, the Germans were prisoners on board our ships. Some were picked up by our own men who jumped overboard. Such is the speed of the Navy, always on the job. Lad! if you want action, get in the game and enlist in the navy. Recruiting stations everywhere."

Poster printed on paper--black-and-white image with black and red text. 14 x 17 in.

Scope and Contents note

Image of German U-boat being bombed as seen from deck of American ship. Text: "For this Hun the war is over, blown to bits by a depth bomb planted at the right time. It is the merry little depth bomb--in destroyer lingo, "the ash can" which upends the Kaiser's subs and puts them to sleep on the ocean bed. Containing a heavy charge of explosive, the bomb is dropped and explodes at a set depth. In this case the bomb must have been dropped before the U-boat dove over it, the explosion lifting the sub's bow upwards and tearing it to pieces. . . Boy, if you have red blood, come across when the going is good and enlist, one service, once call, Navy, Reserve, or Coast Guard."

Poster printed on paper--black-and-white image with black and red text. 14 x 17 in.

Scope and Contents note

Image of American ship sinking German U-boat. Text: "In hunting the Hun submarine, American destroyers have made good. The British Admiralty has officially said so. In the House of Commons the men of the Parker received praise for valorous courage and British decorations have been conferred upon our officers and men. How many enemy subs our patrols and those of the Allies have sunk cannot be told. Suffice that our destroyers are on the job and putting it across. So get in the game and enlist in the Navy."

MilColl.WWI.Posters.11.11 What the Navy Is Doing--The Homecoming of the Victory Makers ca. 1917-1918

Scope and Contents note

Several black-and-white photographs of Navy vessels, officers, and a parade in New York. Text: "Here they are--back from the scrap, victors of the Boche. From Admiral to lamplighter they did their valiant trick and brought honor to the Navy and the Flag. New York cheered itself hoarse in the welcome. And with the anchor down and true to sailor-form, all hands broke for liberty, sweethearts and wives. It was our men in blue who fought the Hun, laid the mines and upended the German subs. Our fellows made good over there. But now the Navy wants men to make good on this side. So join the Navy. The service for training and travel." "Photographs by the U.S. Navy Photographic Division and Lieut. W.A. Nightingale, Construction Corps, U.S.N."

MilColl.WWI.Posters.11.13 Warding Off a Night Attack
Scope and Contents note
Black-and-white photograph of Navy gun crew firing at night. Text: "Each Dreadnought carries twenty or more 5-inch rapid fire guns for repelling the attacks of torpedo vessels. These guns are loaded and fired twenty times per minute and hurl a sixty pound projectile at a target two miles off. The rays of a searchlight (shown as light streaks in the upper part of picture) define the point of aim. In order to be an efficient member of a gun's crew, a man-o-war's-man must be keen, calm, quick, agile, precise, and ready, instantly, to meet any emergency--Navy training develops such men and they always make good. Why not join the Navy, get the training, and serve your country--now."
